

Wilmington June 27 1892

My Dear Mr. Gray

You two cards, at hand for which many thanks.
It was a sorrow not to meet you and Mrs. Gray at the good Redfield, and a sorrow that there was cause for our not being there.

Mrs. Cauly's weak eyes were severely strained last fall finally resulting in an exudation between the coroid coat and the retina finally working its way through the latter with a danger of detachment. This by great care was averted, but a scar has been left on the retina so far impairing the vision - and there is much inflammation and consequent opacity of the vitious, humor which she thinks is perceptibly increasing. She is in much fear of the result and very much depressed about it. She wishes me to say that she is very much obliged for your kind sympathy with her in what she feels to be a real affliction.

Our little boy is almost well but his nurse has taken the disease but is improving, and we hope to be clear of this trouble soon.

With our kindest regards for yourself and Mr. May,

Ever truly yrs,

Wm Lloyd Garrison